terest from its connexion with one of the most ro-mantic stories in the history of royalty. The la-ter history of the painting has been curious and exciting. The title was claimed by the Earl of Fife's trustees, and the picture has been in courts of law, and the subject of constant litigation, for several years. It is now brought to this country by its owner, and exhibited at the Stuyvesant Inby its owner, and exhibited at the Stuyvesant in-stitute. Whether genuine or not it is a great painting, one of startling force and beauty, and will richly repay a visitor; especially one who feels interested in looking on the countenance of the king in stormy times in Britain.

WOMEN AND LADIES .- In the days of our fathers Women and Laddes.—In the days of our fathers there were such things to be met with as men and women—but now they are all gone, and in their place a race of gentlemen and tadies, or, to be still more refined, a race of "ladies and gentlemen" has sprung up. Women and girls are among the things that were. But "ladies" are found everywhere. Miss Martineau, wishing to see the women wards in a prison in Tennessee, was answered by the warden: "We have no ladies here at present, madam," Now, so far as the ladies were ent. madam," Now, so far as the ladies were ent, madam." Now, so far as the ladies were concerned, it was very well that none of them were in prison; but then it sounds a little odd—ladies in prison! It would seem bad enough for ladies in prison! It would seem bad enough for women to go to such a place.

A lecturer, discoursing upon the characteristics of women, illustrated thus: "Who were the last at the cross? Ladies." On this modern improvement, we have heard of but one thing that beats the above. It was the finishing touch to a marriage ceremony, performed by an exquisite divine up to all modern refinements. When he had thrown the chain of Hymen around the happy couple, he concluded by saying: "I now pronounce you husband and lady." The audience stuffed their handkerchiefs into their mouths, and got out of the room as quickly as possible, to take breath.

AN INCIDENT OF THE REBELLION IN VENEZUE An Incident of the Rebellion in Venezue-La.—Our readers are aware that for a month or two past a rebellion has been in progress in Vene-zuela, a nominal republic of South America. It is now apparent, however, that like most South American revolutions it is likely to prove rather a bloodless affair. An incident related by a gen-tleman just arrived from that country will illus-trate this. At Valencia, a small interior town, about twenty of the inhabitants agreed to pro-claim a revolution, and they proceeded to take possession of the barracks, which were defended by an officer and eight government soldiers. On possession of the barracks, which were detended by an officer and eight government soldiers. On the approach of the rebels the officer attempted in haste to mount his horse, but whether to fight or run away will probably now remain a mystery, for in his hurry one of his pistols was accidentally discharged, whereat the brave rebels incontinently took to their heels in all directions, and the outbreak was at an end, the government soldiers sagely concluding that as their opponents had run away they would stay where they were. The upshot was that eighteen of the rebels were arrested and are now in prison in Porto Cabello. The government has also been successful in putting down the outbreak in other places. They are also organizing a fleet, and have purchased a ves-sel in Baltimore for a man-of-war, but the motive

A SINGULAR CASE.—A rather singular case of incapacity has lately been brought to the attention of the Grammar School committee. By a law of the public schools, all the pupils are required to engage in each and every study of the school. In one of our grammar schools is a young miss belonging to a most respectable family, and in every respect a bright, intelligent, and most active and energetic girl, who is wholly unable to learn arithmetic. Her present master has for the schools, and she now is unable, without hesitancy, to add seven and four together, while multiplications of the school constitution of the digestive functions it is of incapination of the digestive functions it is of incapinate toolera—in short, in all cases of prostration of the digestive functions it is of incapination of the digestive functions it is of incapinate toolera—in short, in all cases of prostration of the digestive functions it is of incapinate tonories for unusual excellence. In view of these facts, the school committee has decided to permit this pupil to refrain from studying this branch, she being allowed to be pro-moted after having been kept down for months on account of her arithmetical knowledge. The case is one which has never before been brought to the attention of the committee. The course adopted with regard to the matter seems, however, the most expedient.

We have a case in mind where a family of four boys attended one of our grammar schools, and all were unable to learn to spell. The greatest pains were taken with them, and no trouble spared to instruct them in the art; and yet after a course of study of six years' duration, one of the boys could not even spell his name correctly. And yet in every other branch the boys were most excellent scholars, and would have received medals but for their spelling .- Boston Traveller, 25th

THE LARGEST CONTRACT IN THE UNITED THE LARGEST CONTRACT IN THE UNITED STATES.—We have it in our power to say it, and we do say it, with a feeling of honorable pride, that we have now in our city two of the largest railroad contractors in the United States. These gentlemen are well-known citizens of Macon, who have always been noted for their enterprise, energy, and public spirit. We have reference to gentlemen are well-known citizens of Macon, who have always been noted for their enterprise, energy, and public spirit. We have reference to Dr. Robert Collins and Major Elam Alaxander, who, as we learn from the recent report of the Directors of the Brunswick and Florida Railroad Company, have taken the contract for building the whole of said road, a distance of two hundred miles, for which they are to get over three millions of dollars and to finish the work in two years. And from the experience and indomitable perseverance of the contractors, we have no doubt whatever of their being able to accomplish the job in the time specified, should no unforeseen accident occur to prevent. When that little contract is finished, we hope they will be employed to construct the Macon and Brunswick air-line road, before they undertake a thousand mile section on the Pacific -Georgia Citizen.

John S. Preston, esq., with his characteristic liberality, has yielded to an urgent request and consented to the exhibition, at the Crystal Palace, of Powers's Eve. The statue will be shipped by the next steamer from this port.

He has also determined to send to the collection of paintings the noble work of DeVeaux, "The Brigand," which will compare favorably with any American picture that has ever been painted. It is a noble monument to the memory of South Carolina's gifted son, whose variations and cannot be travel-Bosros, November 16, 1852.
